- Indra, one of the world's leading technology providers in the electoral field, has already participated in the development of technology and logistical solutions that enabled the successful conduct of the 2008, 2012 and 2017 general elections in Angola

Madrid, February 18, 2022 - Minsait, an Indra company, has been selected by Angola's National Electoral Commission (CNE), the country's highest electoral body, to develop a comprehensive set of technology solutions and logistical operations for the successful conduct of the general election scheduled for August 2022.

Minsait's proposal was chosen unanimously by the CNE's Evaluation Committee, made up of representatives of all the country's political parties, as it met all the requirements of the public tender by the CNE, which was open to proposals made by other companies.

The technology solution encompasses the provisional count and the final tally of the general election. It will ensure compliance with the transparency and security requirements, which will entail the redundancy of the systems for computing, transmission, processing and dissemination of results, among many other services.

In addition, Minsait is to be responsible for the acquisition, transportation and delivery of all the material necessary to carry out this general election.

The proposal also includes a multi-year collaboration model that involves training and knowledge transfer to all personnel involved in the electoral process, as well as providing the CNE with the most advanced technical and technological resources to carry out this or other electoral processes in the future in order to consolidate Angola's digital sovereignty.

Minsait already provided its technology and logistical solutions that allowed the holding of the 2008, 2012 and 2017 general elections in Angola, which were carried out successfully and have made Angola one of the most advanced countries in the use of electoral technology.

Minsait has more than 40 years of experience in electoral support and has developed more than 450 electoral projects in Spain and abroad, with over 4,000 million voters involved, which vouches for it as one of the main technological suppliers in the electoral field worldwide. The company's solutions and services cover all the needs of the electoral cycle, from citizen registration to the capture and dissemination of results during Election Day, including the final electoral count.

It has developed and is currently developing elections in countries such as the United Kingdom, Portugal, Norway, France, Argentina, Chile, Colombia, among others, offering technological and logistical services in the electoral sphere. The company's experience is testament to its structural and technical capability to successfully carry out many projects simultaneously, adapting them to the local regulations in each country. Indra has repeatedly provided electoral services to the European Union (EU) and the United Nations (UN) and is an organization of recognized reputation in the area of electoral processes at the international level.
